Malaysia has seen Japanese investment in a diverse range of industries and has built its strength on its electrical and electronics industry base. Malaysia today is a major player in the fast-expanding E&E market, of which major export destinations include Singapore, Hong Kong, the USA, PRC, Japan and Europe. Global companies have chosen Malaysia as investment hub which Intel to establish their advanced semiconductor packaging plant (approx. MYR30 billion) and the establishment of a new high-performance printed circuit board (PCB) and integrated circuit (IC) plant by Austrian semiconductor giant AT&S (approximately MYR8.5 billion). The number of large-scale semiconductor-related investment projects continue to increase in Malaysia.

For Japanese companies, semiconductor investment projects undertaken in Malaysia in line with the Japanese Government's Overseas Supply Chain Diversification Support Project. In 2022, Fuji Electric and Ferrotec Holdings have decided to establish large-scale new plants worth over 20 billion yen and 15 billion yen respectively.
